

ANN ARBOR IN THE SIXTIES
with Award-Winning Author and Archivist of Popular Culture Michael Erlewine.
October 2, 2011

By Michael Erlewine (Michael@Erlewine.net)

Wednesday October 12, 2011: 7:00 pm to 8:30 pm -- Downtown Library: Multi-Purpose Room.
343 S. Fifth Avenue, Ann Arbor, Michigan.

Revisit the 60s in Ann Arbor - or discover what life was like for Ann Arborites at that time! Former Ann Arborite Michael Erlewine, founder of the All-Music Guide and other archives of popular culture discusses his memories of growing up in town in the 50s and 60s, including being lead singer and harmonica player in the Prime Movers Blues Band, which featured a young Iggy Pop on drums. Erlewine will share his personal memories of growing up in Ann Arbor in the 1950s and what the town was like during the cultural shifts in the Sixties and Seventies. Michael invites other folks from that time to attend and share also.

Note from me:

"Ann Arbor in the Sixties," the first of two talks I will give in Ann Arbor this fall, the first on October 12, 2011 at 7 PM in the multipurpose room at the Ann Arbor District Library, 343 S. Fifth Avenue, Ann Arbor, Michigan. I hope old friends will stop by and join me in conversation.

In December of 2012, also at the Ann Arbor District Library, I will be speaking on Michigan Rock Concert Posters and bringing a gallery of matted and framed posters from that era. I donated my research on concert rock posters to the University of Michigan's Bentley Historical Library some years ago, including hi-res images and data on over 30,000 significant posters .
