

THE "LEAST" OF THEM
July 8, 2011

By Michael Erlewine (Michael@Erlewine.net)

This is the "Least Skipper," which actually makes up the most of the skippers we see, which I guess is what they meant. As the sun comes up thousands of these are waking having spent the cool night on a blade of grass or something similar. They are very quiet at dawn and make perfect guests for focus stacking.

Nikon D3s, Cosina/Voigtlander 125mm f/2.5 APO-Lanthar lens

You can download this at 2048 pixels in Hi-res, and it is quite spectacular.

